Mrs. W. T. Alexander entertained the H. C. Smith family at dinner Saturday night, in recognition of the birthdays of Mrs. Smith and Wilma, which occurred on the 27th, and of Mr. Alexander on the 29th. Dr. and Mrs. W. I. Merrill and children were guests of the evening when two beautiful birthday cakes graced the table.

Miss Gladys Bean and friend motored down from Vallejo last week for an outing. Mr. and Mrs. Bean took them over the Saratoga road to the Big Basin. The road is apparently good and sound but where fills have been made to widen the highway the dirt is loose and risky. Mr. Bean's machine settled over the side on one of these fills and it was necessary to have another machine pull it back on the road. The traveling public should be safeguarded against such treacherous spots and the road crew should make provision to avoid accident.

House Party at the Curry Home

Saturday evening the B. O. Curry home near Campbell was the scene of a delightful dinner party in honor of several friends and relatives who have just returned from overseas. The spacious veranda served as a dining room, it and the garden being made gay with Japanese lanterns. After a perfectly appointed dinner the remainder of the evening was spent in dancing. A dainty feature of the dinner party was a secret hidden in the roses of the center piece. Tiny hearts hidden between the pink petals announced that the wedding of Miss Olva Curry and Mr. Robert L. Dodge would take place in August.

The boys who were welcomed home were Harold W. Alsford, Chester H. Pratt and Harry Bosshart of San Francisco, Robert L. Dodge of Laurel, Leslie Johnson of Stockton, Ed. George of San Jose and Chester Alsford of Oakland.

The welcomers were Mrs. Ed. George of San Jose, Misses Hazel and Gladys Alsford, Marion and Alice Duncan, Myrtle, Olva and Ethel Curry. The out-of-town guests remained over the week-end, enjoying a jolly picnic at a private camp in the Santa Cruz Mts.

Hun Gets Ducking

A German, Max Salin by name, a fruit worker in Campbell was given a real reception at the hands of a bunch of his co-workers Monday evening. He had been making his boasts as to his wrestling and scrapping prowess and when it came to a show he couldn't deliver. At once he fell in the estimation of the boys and when he boasted of his commission in the German army that was the last straw.

The boys gave him a sound threshing and ducked him in the street watering trough. They then took him to San Jose and turned him over to the sheriff as an undesirable resident.

We are informed that thru the influence of one of the prominent men of San Jose that this man has been released and that this is the second apprehension and delivery of this undesirable alien. Already there has been heard a warning note about such actions and authorities should keep an eye out.

Dried Fruit Shipped

San Jose, July 29.—First shipment of 1919 dried apricots by the California Prune and Apricot Growers, Inc., the growers non profit co-operative association organized two years ago on a basis controlled three-fourths of the state's output of dried prunes and apricots, was made last week from the Hanford plant of the association.

Two cars of mixed sizes carried away the honors of being the first to be sent out by the grower's association this year, the first car going to Chicago and the second to New York. This is the first fruit which has been shipped by the California growers this year and was sold several months ago at the association the highest price they have ever been paid for their product.

Owing to the rapid ripening of the apricots and the short season resulting on this fruit it is expected regular shipments will be in full swing early in August. Dried apricots from Southern California will follow the first shipments from the Hanford district and later the Santa Clara Valley fruit will be used to fill orders. The Santa Clara apricots are always later in shipping than the fruit from other parts of the state owing to climatic conditions.

The announcement that first shipments had been made means that the apricot growers have begun to receive the money for their 1919 crop, which, according to early prophecy and predictions as to the size of this year's crop, will turn into a golden harvest for the fruit men who cast their lot with the co-operative association.

Mrs. J. J. Pardee and children arrived home from Yerington, Nev. Tuesday after several weeks' visit with her parents there.

Leonard Smith arrived home from the army of occupation in France last week and says, "It's good to be here." He has had a world of experience crowded into a year and a half which is enough. Never again.

In cases of epidemic the county board of health furnishes vaccine for those who cannot afford it and provision is made whereby the doctor's services are furnished. Those wishing free vaccination may receive same at Dr. Merrill's office.

E. E. Sower went to San Francisco Tuesday on business. He reports that wholesalers declare the leather and shoe market far more serious than is fully realized by the general public. It is now almost an impossibility to get calf skin at any price and shoes will go much higher within the next six months.

Millions Saved in Education by Metrics

Noted Educators Declare Metric Measures Would Mean Great Saving

America's greatest educators are supporting the move made by the World Trade Club of San Francisco to secure the adoption of metric units of weights and measures by Britannia and the United States. "The adoption of the metric system by the United States would facilitate teaching of mathematics and applied sciences in schools," wires President Emeritus Charles W. Eliot of Harvard University. President Nicholas Murray Butler of Columbia has also sent the World Trade Club a telegram of support. Dr. Joseph V. Collins, an eminent educator, declares that the people of the United States lose $314,000,000 yearly in education because of the time wasted in teaching a system so much more complicated and difficult than the metric system.

PUBLIC HIGHWAYS

DRAG ROADS AT PROPER TIME

Fully as Important as It Is That Highways Should Be Done Right—Keep Ruts From Forming.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

It is fully as important that a road be dragged at the right time as it is that the dragging be properly done. Furthermore, the difficulties involved in prescribing definite rules for determining when dragging should be done are equally as great as those already encountered in attempting to define how it should be done. Only very general statements concerning this feature of the work can properly be made here, and much must be left to the experienced judgment of those who decide when the dragging of any particular road is to be started and when it is to be stopped.

The rule frequently cited that all earth roads should be dragged immediately after every rain, is in many cases entirely impracticable and is also very misleading because of the conditions which it fails to contemplate. It is true that there are many road surfaces composed of earth or earthy material which do not become very muddy under traffic, even during long rainy seasons, and since such surfaces usually tend to harden very rapidly as soon as the weather clears up, it may be desirable to drag roads of this kind immediately after a rain. Such roads, however, would not ordinarily need to be dragged after every rain, because of the strong tendency that they naturally possess of holding their shape. On the other hand, many varieties of clay and soil tend to become very muddy under only light traffic after very moderate rains, and, it is evident that roads constructed of such materials could not always be successfully dragged immediately after a rain. Sometimes, in fact, it may be necessary to wait until several consecutive clear days have elapsed after a long rainy spell before the road is sufficiently dried out to keep ruts from forming almost as rapidly as they can be filled by dragging.

Well-constructed sand-clay topsoil roads should not often become muddy after they are once well compacted. They may become seriously rutted, however, under heavy traffic, during rainy weather, and are almost sure to need dragging several times each year. Such roads should ordinarily be dragged as soon after a rain as practicable as otherwise the surface soon becomes dry and hard, so that it is necessary to do considerably more dragging in order to fill the ruts. Furthermore, the material which the drag moves will not compact readily unless it contains a considerable amount of moisture.

Gravel roads can be effectively maintained with a road drag only when the gravel composing the surface is fine grained and contains a considerable quantity of clay earth. Gravel road surfaces in which this condition prevails not infrequently get badly out of shape during wet weather, and may sometimes require considerably more attention than well-constructed sand-clay topsoil roads. The time for dragging gravel roads is unquestionably while they are wet. In fact, the best results are sometimes obtained by doing the dragging after the road has become thoroughly soaked and while it is still raining.

In general, it may be said that the best time to drag any type of road is when the material composing the surface contains sufficient moisture to compact readily after it has been moved by the drag and is not sufficiently wet for the traffic following the drag to produce mud.

Change in Road Sentiment.

When we consider the fact that such a large proportion of our population are owners of automobiles it is not difficult to understand the change in sentiment in regard to road building that has recently developed.

An Old Kissing Custom Is Revived

An old kissing custom, for a long time considered obsolete, has been revived at Hurgerford, England. The "tuttimen," or collectors of tithes, executed their rights by going from house to house and demanding either a kiss or a penny from each woman. This photograph shows the tuttimen at the workhouse, where the aged women inmates paid the kiss penalty.

New Map of the World

Outlines Still Far From Perfect

We can get some idea already of the new map of the world, though its outlines are still far from perfect, observes a writer in the Providence Journal. Along Germany's western frontier Alsace-Lorraine goes unconditionally to France, with the Sarre basin also ceded to her for 15 years, the mines of that region given over as partial indemnity to French ownership and a plebiscite 15 years hence provided for. Luxemburg is freed from German control. Belgium gets a small area, part outright and part subject to popular vote, and a plebiscite will determine whether the inhabitants of Schleswig prefer to be included within Germany or Denmark for the future.

Germany will retain nominal control of the valley east of the Rhine, but it is to be permanently demilitarized. German Austria becomes an independent state, along with the new Czecho-Slovakia, Jugo-Slavia and Poland. Danzig will be a free city with Polish affiliations and Germany is forced to recognize the new states of western Russia.

In Africa the immense German holdings go to the allied and associated powers as mandatories. Japan agrees to return to the Peking government all the territory on the Chinese mainland which she has lately acquired, but will have Tsingtao in perpetuity. The various German islands of the Pacific go to Japan, Australia and New Zealand as mandatories, which means that in all human probability those countries will be permanently installed there under the convenient fiction of the league of nations language. Even the German slice of the Antarctic continent is to be yielded to the entente. Will it be necessary to give anyone a "mandate" for this frigid and uninhabited region?

There are still so many details to be worked out that it may be some time before the authentic new atlases can be issued.

Taxis and Other Motor Vehicles Must Pay Tax

Taxicabs, jitney buses and other passenger automobiles operated for hire are subject to special government taxes under regulations issued by the international revenue bureau interpreting the provisions of the revenue act. An automobile with a seating capacity of from three to seven is taxed $10 a year, and buses capable of carrying more than seven are taxed $20. Two-passenger cars are exempt. The regulations provide that "bus lines, automobile stages and jitneys operating over regular routes" and cars operated by sightseeing companies are liable to the tax. The tax is assessed against the car and not the owner, so that if a man sells a car he may not transfer the tax to another car. This tax became effective January 1.

HIS CRUTCH

He hobbles down the quiet street,
A youthful veteran
Whose heart is still attuned unto
The drum's wild rataplan,
Whose ears are deafened even yet
By battle's dread alarm,
Whose halting step depends upon
The crutch beneath his arm.

His good right leg is gone—afar
In Flanders mud it lies,
But there's a smile upon his lips,
For still Old Glory flies.
And though a slow and painful gait
His mundane progress mars,
Behold! his spirit vaults the clouds
And strides among the stars.

Washington's sword and Franklin's staff
And Lincoln's pen shall be
Embossed forevermore upon
The shield of Liberty;
And lo! the doughboy's battered crutch,
Through Time's eternal flight,
Will stand a signpost on the road
To Freedom's mountain height.
—Minna Irving in New York Sun.

Cape Prince of Wales Is Said to Be the Stormiest Region in All the World

The stormiest place in all the world is said to be Cape Prince of Wales, which is the westernmost point of Alaska. It is marked by a considerable mountain 2,210 feet high, and fierce winds blow there perpetually. Storms from the Arctic ocean assail this inhospitable region all the year round.

Frank Hess of the government geological survey says that August 30 he found himself in the midst of deep snow on Cape Prince of Wales, with a wind blowing so hard that he had to get behind a rock to avoid being blown into the sea.

The weather for the moment was clear and he could see the coast of Siberia, across Bering strait, 40 miles away. Here and there were rocks that bore curious masses of snow crystals, which stood out horizontally, having been thrown and compacted by wind. It was bitter cold, but down below were vast fields of beautiful forget-me-nots.

On the south side of the mountain Mr. Hess says that he came across Eskimo dwellings—"igloos" dug underground and walled and roofed with timbers. No trees grow in that region, but the natives of far northern Alaska have always a plentiful supply of driftwood, carried from the Yukon river by an ocean current that skirts the coast.

The underground igloos (constructed to escape the storm and wind) were so built as to form connecting rooms, with communicating doors that were mere holes through which the occupants were obliged to crawl on hands and knees. The only ventilation was afforded by the vertebrae of a whale (which served as an airtube), thrust up through the roof.

Great Bodies of Water Not Classed Under "Seven" Seas

"What are the 'seven seas?'" a subscriber asks, and adds: "I can find no explanation about them in cyclopedias or dictionaries." There is indeed a great paucity of information about this familiar expression, which is the title of one of Kipling's books. A note, however, in the Oxford English Dictionary under "seven" reads: "The Seven seas—the Arctic, Antarctic, North and South Pacific, North and South Atlantic, and Indian oceans." Curiously, this dictionary does not mention the seven seas under the word "seas," but gives instead "the four seas—the seas bounding Great Britain on the four sides."—Outlook.

Studio Days

By DOROTHY DOUGLAS

(Copyright, 1919, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

West put a few lingering touches on his canvas before the setting sun told him that he must wait until another day before finishing the delicate portrait's head. A riotous little air fell from time to time from his lips, but its measure became gradually subdued while the soft veil of twilight captured the artist's soul and bade him express his joy in a more quiet manner.

A sunny smile lurked in West's eyes; the gold of his hair was rumpled and his smock shockingly dirty, but little did he care since the studio rent was paid for the following month. Also the canvas on his easel would easily insure another six months' living.

And outside his door stood a girl whose eyes held all the wistfulness in the world and whose heart was absorbing every note of that magic, happy lilt that fell from West's lips. Finally she knocked.

West was not prepared for a visitor, and such a one as he found on the landing was a challenge to the most sturdy of heartbeats.

"May I come in?"

"Absurd waste of words," West said, and with the little courtly bow that was a part of the man he watched his visitor cross the threshold.

The wistfulness vanished swiftly and a tremendous gladness that took the form of glistening tears stood in the girl's eyes. She fled to the small window that held the glow of the setting sun and stood silently for a moment. Then West saw her brush a hand across her eyes before she turned again to him

"You are not to think me mad," she said tremulously. "For three long years I have hungered to be in this studio again, and now—now my heart's thumping like a bird gone mad—just because I am here." She laughed softly with so much of glad emotion that West found the world an even more wonderful place to dwell in.

He started to prepare tea on the improvised tea cart beside his easel, but the girl slipped quickly over.

"I want to make the tea," she insisted. "See! I have brought some cinnamon cakes from the same old corner bakery that was there three years ago. I somehow felt I would be allowed to stay for tea—if I came in."

Her eyes were so adorable with their new-found happiness that West said frankly, "I would have dragged you in had I known you were out on that landing—so make yourself perfectly at home."

The girl threw her great moleskin cape on the dusty armchair just as carelessly as in the old days she had tossed off her threadbare tweed coat. Her gown was a dream and her small toque a brilliant-hued affair with an absurd something wabbling uncertainly over the edge. Although she was as chic as any wonderful poster, she pulled off the toque and with a swift gesture rumpled the conventional, smooth coiffure into a bewildering head of burnished copper.

"You have utterly no regard for a poor bachelor's heart, have you?" West inquired. There was warm, boyish admiration in his glance. "But I will try to remember that you are just a little wraith that has blown into my Bohemia for a cup of tea."

"The little wraith would very much like a smock—if you have a second one," she laughed back at him.

"It would take four of you to fill it up," he said after a successful rummage.

They both laughed like children at the result and for the first time in three years a happy lilt of song fell from Gretchen's lips.

"Oh, yes—my name is Gretchen McVicker," she told him by way of tardy introduction. "I saw yours on the door as I came up the creaky stairs. I used always to think those stairs would cave in. They are just as frail as ever, but I loved every creak they gave out for me."

She was exploring all the while she talked and it was not long before a dainty tea was ready and they sank on opposite sides of the quaint cart West had fashioned. They were both Bohemian enough to enjoy the rare unconventionality of the moment without any strain.

"How long have you been in this studio?" Gretchen asked between munches of cinnamon cake.

"I've managed to pay the rent here for three years," he told her.

"Oh! You came in just as I left, then. I was here for the two happiest years I have ever had," Gretchen said, and the wistfulness clouded her eyes. "I used to sing just as you were singing when I came up. Of course, I never expected to set the world on fire through my art, but somehow I made a scant living—scant as to money, but overflowing with joy. I did not always have enough money to buy cinnamon cakes," she laughed, but her lips were tremulous.

"And then," urged West.

"Then I married. After that it didn't seem as if life held a thing for me. There were no quaint Bohemians strolling in and out of my studio, no much-needed checks coming to me from inspired drawings and, worst of all, there was no freedom of thought or action. My husband gave me a gorgeous limousine for my last birthday, but it didn't bring even one atom of the joy that my first hard-earned check gave me. I have everything on earth that money can buy."

"But why didn't you keep up your art work—your Bohemian friends—wouldn't that have helped to make you happy?" West was kindly sympathetic, but there was beginning a great urge within him to try to keep this rare girl within his circle. It seemed sheer and unadulterated madness to want to keep her, since she was married to a wealthy man and her fancy for Bohemian life and studio days were perhaps but passing desires, but there—she was answering his question.

"It was not worth while my working at art when I didn't have to. If I had possessed genius or even a great degree of talent I would have kept at it. But I only have talent enough to keep the wolf from the door. As for my Bohemian friends—well, I tried keeping them in my life, but my husband called them all 'nuts' and made me so unhappy about them that I gave them all up. Oh—I just can't tell you what it means to me to be actually back here with a smock on sitting in my very own studio."

"We won't quarrel either about the studio or the smock," said West. "I am only glad that I happen to be the tenant here while you have chosen to play at studio days again."

"So am I," greeted Gretchen and gazed contentedly at the slim boyish man the while she realized that he possessed tremendous charm. "I might have found a crusty old maid who wouldn't let me in at all." She was thoughtful for so long a while that West looked apprehensively at her and wondered if he had done anything to displease her. But before he could form words to inquire, Gretchen asked coaxingly: "Are you going to want me to come again?"

West was just a bit puzzled. He also knew that he wanted her very, very much indeed. It was difficult to know how best to express his thoughts. He decided that his habitual frankness was the best course and after that she must take the situation in her own hands.

"You have asked me a straight question, little wraith," he said and despite himself a great softness crept into his voice and eyes, "so I must tell you that if I had my own way I would not let you go out of the studio again. You have come in of your own free will just to humor a whim which will perhaps pass as quickly as it came, but you have thrust something into my studio and into my soul that I desire greatly to keep."

So brilliant a color flamed into Gretchen's cheeks and so tremendous a light into her eyes that West stopped speaking. He had annoyed her beyond forgiveness.

The sun trailed down and away from the window, leaving but the steady warm glow of twilight.

"I should not have told you this," he continued finally; "you are the wife of another man—"

"But I'm not—now," Gretchen put in quickly, tremulously. "I would not have come back to studio days had he been still living. And now I'm all alone with so much money that it weighs me down and I just want to come back to Bohemia and paint dreadful pictures and get snippy little checks for them and—" It was she now who stopped, blinded by the happiness that West's eyes reflected.

"Then you are free—free to sit at my tea cart every day—free to let me keep that which has come into my heart and free to be happy in the dear old studio way?"

Gretchen nodded silently and because West wanted to take her in his arms but didn't think it quite the thing he walked over to the window and stood looking out at the twilight. Gretchen arose swiftly and stood beside him her slim hand touching his sleeve.

"Love makes the world a very wonderful place to live in, doesn't it?" she asked softly.

"That smock is so absurdly big it is difficult to find you in it," observed West.

"Still, I feel that you found me," laughed Gretchen as together they gazed happily out over the housetops from the studio window.

Ancient Timepieces.

During the reign of Edward I. the first genuine clock in England was placed in Westminster abbey. It must have been quite a wonder, and it remained alone in its glory for many years.

In the fourteenth century Peter Lightfoot, a monk of Glastonbury abbey, made a clock, which is now preserved in the British museum.

The veteran has been patched up a little, but it is still in fair order and marks time as well as ever (better, probably, for a pendulum has been added), notwithstanding its patriarchal age of five centuries.

Perhaps it did not mark time very well before it got its pendulum, for clocks until near the middle of the seventeenth century were by no means reliable as timekeepers.

Changing Jobs.

The president of an Indianapolis bank, who is far from being a Beau Brummel in his dress, was standing on the sidewalk in East Washington street near a tray of shoestrings, and a stylishly dressed woman approached him:

"Here's a dime; let me have one of your longest pairs of black shoestrings."

The banker gave the woman his card and they laughed over the mistake.

BOY SCOUTS

SCOUTS HONOR ROOSEVELT

A memorial to Theodore Roosevelt, drafted by Hermann Hagedorn and adopted by the National Council of the Boy Scouts of America, is as follows:

He was found faithful over a few things and he was made ruler over many; he cut his own trail clean and straight and millions followed him toward the light.

He was frail; he made himself a tower of strength. He was timid—he made himself a lion of courage. He was a dreamer; he became one of the great doers of all time.

Men put their trust in him; women found a champion in him; kings stood in awe of him, but children made him their playmate.

He broke a nation's slumber with his cry, and it rose up. He touched the eyes of blind men with a flame and gave them vision. Souls became swords through him; swords became servants of God.

He was loyal to his country, and he exacted loyalty; he loved many lands, but he loved his own land best.

He was terrible in battle, but tender to the weak; joyous and tireless, being free from self-pity; clean with a cleanness that cleansed the air like a gale.

His courtesy knew no wealth or class; his friendship, no creed or color or race. His courage stood every onslaught of savage beast and ruthless man, of loneliness, of victory, of defeat. His mind was eager, his heart was true, his body and spirit, defiant of obstacles, ready to meet what might come.

He fought injustice and tyranny; bore sorrow gallantly; loved all nature, bleak spaces and hardy companions, hazardous adventure and the zest of battle. Wherever he went he carried his own pack, and in the uttermost parts of the earth he kept his conscience for his guide.

PERUVIAN BOY SCOUTS.

The boy scout movement in Peru has made considerable progress in the three years since the first scout brigade was established. It has now extended to all the principal cities there.

The official report for the year says that the scout movement in Peru has filled a need among a people whose education is along purely intellectual lines, and efforts which tend to the development of the mental, physical and moral forces of the young are all the more necessary to make the future generation a creditable one.

The scout movement in Peru has made as much progress as private initiative will warrant. The hope is now that the government will aid in the work.

One excursion of Peru scouts, lasting 25 days, was made to the Panama canal.

THANKFUL FOR SCOUT TRAINING

From the army of occupation comes this word:

"I am in the medical corps, and what we must know in regard to the handling of wounded and the first-aid work is taught in scouting first aid. If I did not have the men who had been in scouting as boys and as officials I would have been at a loss in picking men for dangerous work such as evacuating the wounded from the front line trench. Two such have been recommended for the D. S. C. Even in war they showed themselves to be true scouts. The only thing I can say is, 'Thank God for the scouts, who have always been prepared.'"

And Sergt. Edward Pickering is not the only one who has expressed these sentiments.

BOY SCOUT DOINGS.

Boy scouts of Los Angeles, Cal., held off one day in their milk bottle drive to welcome home their big comrades from France.

The boy scouts in State College, Pa., organized and maintained a fire fighting patrol to assist the community in preventing or controlling forest fires.

Among the daily good turns reported by the boy scouts of Troop No. 1 of Albion, Okla., was recovering a stolen dog after following the thief for five miles.

Boy scouts in a troop in Woodford, Mo., saved the lives of two people from drowning at different times and rendered first-aid to a woman who had been knocked down by a vehicle and injured.

The beauty of Oklahoma City will be preserved, because the boy scouts are on the job. An unauthorized pruning of trees on streets or on park property will be reported to the park commissioner.

One thousand Roosevelt memorial trees of white Norway pine, secured from the forestry commission, were planted by boy scouts at Baudette, Minn.

All that the boy scouts of Gloucester, Miss., ask is for the township to buy the lawn mower, and they'll see that the town hall grass stays well trimmed.

Terre Haute, Ind., has designated a conspicuous bit of park property to become "Scout park." Here each troop will plant a Roosevelt memorial tree, while all the scouts will undertake to beautify the park.

Canning Club Products in Demand, Bring Good Prices and Increase Food Supply

Some of the canning club girls organized by the home demonstration agents of the United States department of agriculture and the state agricultural colleges utilize their canning knowledge only to provide the family table with plenty of fruit and vegetables. The larger number, however, not only practice what they have learned for the benefit of their families, but increase their incomes by marketing the surplus. The agents who helped during the canning later assist in the marketing of the products. The uniform excellence of the 4-H brand makes it a comparatively easy task to keep a customer once he has used the products. The agent in Jasper county, Mississippi, has found a ready sale for the canned fruits and vegetables her girls wish to sell. One day in March $175 worth were weighed, sold and shipped. The demand is constant, because the buyer reports that the club girls' canned goods are the best he has found on the market.

Use Large Granite Slab to Form Marriage Certificate

Among the islanders of Jersey there is a pretty but curious marriage custom. As soon as the ceremony is over, and when the happy couple are entering into occupation of their home, the large granite slab over the porch is inscribed with the initials of the bride and bridegroom, and between the two a rough representation of two hearts is entwined, the whole thus forming a marriage certificate for all the world to see. It is said that, should the couple by any chance be one day divorced, the hearts are pierced through by an arrow, which is cut into them.

Wasn't Impressed.

A pompous gentleman happened to stray on to the grounds of Lord Blantyre one day, and was ordered off by the Scotch gamekeeper in language more forcible than polite.

"Sir," said the pompous one, "do you know who I am? I am the Faulds of Aedgeriff."

"I dinna care if ye are the Falls o' Niagara," said the gamekeeper, "ye're goon oot o' this."

CALOMEL TODAY, SICK TOMORROW

Dose of nasty calomel makes you sick and you lose a day's work.

Calomel salivates! It's mercury. Calomel acts like dynamite on a sluggish liver. When calomel comes into contact with sour bile it crashes into it, causing cramping and nausea.

If you feel bilious, headachy, constipated and all knocked out, just go to your druggist and get a bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone for a few cents, which is a harmless vegetable substitute for dangerous calomel. Take a spoonful and if it doesn't start your liver and straighten you up better and quicker than nasty calomel and without making you sick, you just go back and get your money.

If you take calomel today you'll be sick and nauseated tomorrow; besides, it may salivate you, while if you take Dodson's Liver Tone you will wake up feeling great, full of ambition and ready for work or play. It's harmless, pleasant and safe to give to children; they like it.—Adv.

That Altered the Case.

The orderly went around the messroom asking if there were any complaints.

"Yes, sir," said one Tommy; "this 'ere blinkin' joint's raw."

The officer glanced at it and saw that the complaint was justified, but he said: "Well, my man, don't you know that Captain Webb trained on raw beef to swim the channel?"

"Oh," said Tommy. "I thought we was goin' across in boats."

Force of Practice.

"That's nothing. Any architect ought to be able to put up a good story."

Laugh When People Step On Your Feet

Try this yourself then pass it along to others. It works!

Ouch ! ? ! ? ! ! This kind of rough talk will be heard less here in town if people troubled with corns will follow the simple advice of this Cincinnati authority, who claims that a few drops of a drug called freezone when applied to a tender, aching corn or hardened callus stops soreness at once, and soon the corn or callus dries up and lifts right off without pain.

He says freezone dries immediately and never inflames or even irritates the surrounding skin. A small bottle of freezone will cost very little at any drug store, but will positively remove every hard or soft corn or callus from one's feet. Millions of American women will welcome this announcement since the inauguration of the high heels. If your druggist doesn't have freezone tell him to order a small bottle for you|—Adv.

Tired Nervous Mothers

Should Profit by the Experience of These Two Women

Buffalo, N. Y.—"I am the mother of four children, and for nearly three years I suffered from a female trouble with pains in my back and side, and a general weakness. I had professional attendance most of that time but did not seem to get well. As a last resort I decided to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound which I had seen advertised in the newspapers, and in two weeks noticed a marked improvement. I continued its use and am now free from pain and able to do all my housework."—Mrs. B. B. Zielinska, 202 Weiss Street, Buffalo, N. Y.

Portland, Ind.—"I had a displacement and suffered so badly from it at times I could not be on my feet at all. I was all run down and so weak I could not do my housework, was nervous and could not lie down at night. I took treatments from a physician but they did not help me. My Aunt recommended Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I tried it and now I am strong and well again and do my own work and I give Lydia E. Pinkham's Compound the credit."—Mrs. Josephine Kimble, 935 West Race Street, Portland, Ind.

In the Superior Court of the State of California, in and for the County of Santa Clara

In the matter of the Estate of Jane Cordelia O'Neil, Deceased.) NOTICE

Notice is hereby given, that pursuant to an order of the Superior Court of the State of California, in and for the County of Santa Clara, made on the 3rd day of March, A D 1916, in the matter of the estate of said Jane Cordelia O'Neil, deceased, the undersigned, the administrator of the estate of said deceased, will sell at private sale, in one parcel, as hereinafter described and set forth, to the highest bidder upon the terms and conditions hereinafter mentioned and subject to confirmation by said Superior Court, on or after the 11th day of August, A. D. 1919, all of the right, title and interest and estate of said Jane Cordelia O'Neil, deceased, at the time of her death, which was and is the ownership in fee simple of the real property hereinafter described, and of the right, title and interest that the said estate has by operation of law, or otherwise, acquired, other than, or in addition to, that of said deceased, at the time of her death, of, in and to, that certain lot, piece or parcel of land, situate, lying and being in the City of San Jose, County of Santa Clara, State of California, and particularly described as follows, to-wit:

COMMENCING at a point in the Northerly line of San Salvador Street in the City of San Jose, about 18 feet Easterly from the intersection of said line of said Street with the Westerly boundary line of said City as said western boundary line existed on the 17th day of November, 1896, said point being the Southeasterly corner of Lot 2 of the Sunol Partition of a part of the Los Coches Rancho, and running thence Westerly along said line of said Street 73 feet; thence at right angles with last named line, Northerly 288 ft.; thence Easterly and parallel with said Street about 25 feet to the Easterly line of said Lot 2; and thence Southerly along said line of said Lot to the place of beginning, and being the same premises conveyed by Thomas Gifford to Laura Bethell and Cora Bethell by deed dated November 17th, 1896, which said deed is of record in the office of the County Recorder of the County of Santa Clara, State of California, in Book 195 of Deeds, at page 305.

Save and except therefrom that certain part or portion thereof conveyed by said Cora Bethell, therein designated as Cora M. Bethell, and Laura Bethell to Anne E. Adams by deed dated September 3rd, 1913, which said deed is of record in the office of the County Recorder of the County of Santa Clara, State of California, in Book 406 of Deeds, at page 341, and bounded and described as follows:

July Babies Rare

Chicago, Illinois, is conducting a campaign which bids fair to determine which is the best month for babies. Mrs. Walter S. Brewster, vice-chairman of The Fatherless Children of France, and in charge of a national campaign to secure American aid to the extent of 10 cents a day for one year for 60,000 little French war waifs, issued an appeal for birthday donations of $3.00 to care for a child during the donor's birthday month.

The returns disclosed that it is almost impossible to unearth a July birthday. A group of children of Lake Forest families —Lake Forest being the wealthiest suburb of Chicago—undertook to form an adoption group of the twelve calendar months. January, February, March, and all the other birthdays were easy to find, but no July child has yet been discovered and the local papers are advertising for July children.

What's the matter with July?

To adopt a fatherless little French war waif,—which means to act as its American godmother or godfather while it remains with its own mother in France—or to make a birthday donation, write to Mrs. Walter S. Brewster, Room 635, 410 S. Michigan Ave., Chicago. Every cent donated goes direct to the child. The small expenses of the work are paid by interested friends.

THE EXPECTED HAS COME TO PASS. The army is coming in for its share of criticism and according to reports many of them are just and needful. A number of the army officers from the top down are charged with cruelty and the investigation committee is giving them the third degree. Whether or not these particular charges are true, there are plenty of complaints that are true, both from army and navy. The "Y" men were always told of the troubles and hardships of the soldiers and sailors and when the "Y" was getting its worst knocks many of the boys felt sore because they must keep mum on complaints of the service. Many said that those complaints were jokes beside others that could be given. One officer in a hospital told a "Y" man when discussing the kicks the "Y" was getting, "Why Mr. G.—when peace is signed and the boys are out of the service the flood of complaints that will go in against army officers and tactics will stir up such a row that the "Y's" little bruises will be forgotten. I'll keep mum now but I could tell a book of well founded kicks and may be I will when I get out of uniform." These complaints were almost invariably against certain rough and stern officers who thot more of themselves and authority than they did of their men.

WHO CAUSED THE WAR? It has been a much mooted question in Germany since the close of the war and the buck has been passed from the stable boy up to the Kaiser and back again. Now another Hun says that Hollweg is the guilty one. It matters little who did cause it, the blood of the world is on Germany's hands and all the peace treaties, legislation and regulation of trade can't make this people forget. If Germany is to pay her indemnity thru the world trade why not make it take her about 200 years to do so? That would be a gentle reminder for quite a spell.

The Terrible Turk, Germany's ally is still on the rampage with the extermination of the Armenian as his end and aim. In the names of humanity, why is this brute allowed to live. He cannot be converted to the idea that the poor Armenian has a right to live. While they now have him on the hip why don't the allies put an end to him. Tolerance is entirely misplaced in that land.

Mr. I. P. Beal and H. C. McVea left Thursday for a fishing trip at Lake Tahoe, to be about a week.

Mrs. Godsman and family of Skyland were guests at the S. L. Hayes home yesterday.

Everett Davis was confined to the house part of the week with a slight indisposition, probably caused by too much fruit.

With this week practically closes the apricot canning season but drying is still in full swing. Clarence Davison and his crew have been receiving dried 'cots at the association plant all the week.

Freeman Duncan and family are expected Monday at the F. E. Duncan home to spend part of his two weeks vacation. He may visit his sister, Mrs. Donohue, before resuming his duties.

The Misses Janice and Bernice Baugh and Ruth Hayes entertained a party of about 30 young people at the S. L. Hayes home Friday evening. The party passed a most enjoyable time in social games and dancing.

Miss Ruth Virginia Price arrived at her future home in Vacaville July 23rd. She is well pleased with her surroundings and her parents and grandparents are quite proud of their new possession. Here's health, Ruth.

The Alison-Kennedy camping party arrived home from their Yosemite outing trip Monday evening having made the entire run from the valley in one day. Of course, a most enjoyable trip and we sure envied you-all.

Mrs. H. U. Castle and son who have been guests at the I. P. Beal home leave to-day for Berkeley from where they will start next week for their home at Elko, Nev. They were accompanied to the city by Mrs. Beal and Miss Helen.

Unexpected but very welcome guests at the H. A. Watrous home for the week-end were Mr. and Mrs. L. S. Pardee of Hughson, Cal., Miss Nina M. Farwell of Berkeley, Mrs. M. E. Dryden and Miss Beth Dryden of San Francisco, Mr. Ralph Evans, and Mr. and Mrs. Lynn F. Ingrim of San Francisco.

Sgt. "Doc" Wells of the Canadian forces, the man who helped put over the second liberty loan in this valley, made Campbell a short call this week. He was more than pleased to meet members of the local glee club who campaigned with him and remarked that it was good "to get back to that bunch of singers." He may see fit to locate with us.

Dancing Party

Miss Helen Beal was hostess to about twenty of her young friends at a dancing party Wednesdsy evening, given at the home of Mrs. B. O. Curry, in compliment to her cousin, Douglas Castle.

The spacious porch and grounds were attractively lighted with Japanese lanterns and music was furnished by piano and victrola. The party was conducted after the manner of grown-ups with programs and announcement cards. Kewpie prizes were given, hidden in the ice cream.

Mesdames Beal, Castle and Curry assisted in the entertainment.

Why America Adopted Prohibition

In the answer to this question dry America finds her approach to other nations. A dry America means a dry world if American prohibition is reasonable and successful.

There are five outstanding reasons why America adopted Prohibition:

1. Scientific investigation of the effects of alcohol upon the individual and the race, and widespread distribution of conclusions reached.

America reached the conclusion that a little alcohol does a little harm and much alcohol does much harm; the man who drinks a little is worth less and the man who drinks a lot is worth nothing. And furthermore, that alcohol is a race poison; every drinker, to the degree of his drinking, is a sinner against the race. This arraignment of alcohol is so fundamental that, once accepted, alcohol had to go.

2. The new social conscience.

Men are being set above money. It is being recognized that the first and chief function of society is to make men. Because alcohol interfered with the making of men and was corrupting politics in the interests of special privilege, alcohol had to go.

3. Modern cost finding systems and workmen's compensation laws.

Formerly the case against alcohol rested on moral evidence only. The moral reasons are as strong as ever, but we hear little or nothing about them. The deadly reasons urged today against alcohol are eugenic and economic. Because alcohol poisons the race, wastes food, multiplies costs and lowers efficiency, alcohol had to go.

4. Effective organization of temperance forces.

When the dry forces of America ceased to act independently and began to act together—when the five strong fingers of the prohibition hand were clenched into a mighty prohibition fist, alcohol had to go.

5. State after state had sampled Prohibition and liked it.

There were twenty-five dry states before Congress submitted the national amendment. There are thirty two dry states now. These states had tried the thing and liked it. It worked. Hence the nation is going to try it and so alcohol had to go.

And it, having tried it, the nation likes it, other nations will try it until there will be a constitutional majority of the world, and from the world alcohol will have to go

Keep Insured, Boys

The government is now instituting a great conservation campaign to keep her returned fighters on the life insured list. During the war about 98 per cent of the men carried the government war insurance. Since that time the men have been urged to continue their insurance in one form or another. Arrangements heve been made so boys who have lapsed in payment of premiums may be reinstated. Uncle Sam the wealthiest company in the world gives the surest and cheapest insurance and every man who can possibly carry one of his policies should do so. Remembered Diagnosis.

When Sophie was nine years old she was not feeling well and had what she thought a great deal of pain. The doctor was called and he said: "Oh, you're all right; those pains are just growing pains." A few days later a friend of the family called and inquired of Sophia how she was feeling. "Oh," she said, "I am better, but still growing."
